

Frontend Engineer

We're on a mission to transform insurance through the power of technology. Our next generation SaaS platform provides a single architecture that is uniting and strengthening the industry. Products, markets, channels and insurance parties come together seamlessly across all geographies. It's a new and exciting model, and it's shaping the future of insurance.

Our global team needs a Frontend Engineer to help us achieve our goals. You'll be part of an exciting and dynamic platform team focusing on the entire software lifecycle and will work closely with our backend development team, product and design teams, ensuring they have everything they need to meet all their targets.

Job profile, skills and experience

- You have strong JavaScript, HTML5 and CSS experience and are highly skilled and confident in frameworks like Vue.js, Angular or React.
- You prefer finding simple solutions to complex problems, rather than over-engineering technology that creates unnecessary complexity and builds technical debt.
- Our teams implement features with end to end ownership which requires an understanding of both frontend and backend technologies.
- We believe in customer centric design and you will be creating intuitive and engaging mobile and desktop user experiences with your strong understanding of UX and UI.
- You would love to work in a team taking ownership of application development end to end from source code to deployment using build tools and delivery pipelines for cloud infrastructure.
- You feel confident using CLI tools, writing bash scripts, configuring build tools like Webpack and delivery pipelines for cloud infrastructure services such as AWS, GCP or Azure.

Our culture, your future

Working for Uncharted, you will be joining a global team with an exciting future. We are moving fast, taking technology to the limits, and reshaping the world of insurance. There's a creative energy and determination about everything we do, a collective commitment to transform an industry that is conservative, and tradition based.

That is why we need people who can share our vision, people with the conviction and qualities to make a real difference. Can you rise above the ordinary and the average? Do you have the drive and ambition to take insurance technology to new levels?

- You thrive on challenges and are never short of ideas and insights
- You see problems as opportunities to create something better
- You are confident working on your own initiative but are a committed team member who knows that great things can happen when the right people come together
- You take pride in your work – and the company you work for – and love being part of an organisation that has bold plans and innovation at its core
